Muse

Forever Picking

Snacks inspired by the seasons. This stems from my recollection of being in the garden with my mother and picking anything that was edible.

Making & Breaking

The comfort and satisfaction I get from making and eating bread stems from a long journey with many memories along the way. To me, it means comfort, satisfaction, sharing, connection, love and of course the joy you receive from the actual eating of bread.

Just Down the Road

Ricotta, Tomato, Basil

Many miles have been travelled, and countless hours have been spent during my ongoing quest to find the very best of British producers to supply Muse with ingredients. We celebrate Old Hall Farm as one of them, because it's just down the road from where I grew up in Norfolk.

Our dishes are cooked fresh to order, in an environment where nuts and shellfish are present.

Muse

Simple is Never Easy

Turbot, Courgette, Rose

However simple a dish may look, the time it takes to prepare it can go unnoticed. Hours can disappear in preparing and cooking, yet it can take seconds to eat, so always savour, not devour, this labour of love.

Keep it in the Family

Guinea Fowl, Peach, Beans

The very first time I ate this dish was at my mother in law's home in the sunny foothills of Provence over 15 years ago. It looked like a very simple dish but the combination of flavours from the peach, Beaume de Venise and guinea fowl was incredible. It's a secret family recipe and one that I am very glad to have…

Angels Delight

Raspberry, Meadowsweet, Honey

Raspberries are my favourite berry by far, and as a child I was lucky enough to have them growing in our garden. We would pick them as soon as they were ripe, then beat them with double cream and a sprinkling of the very nostalgic 70's dessert of the decade, Angel Delight, which was absolute heaven!
